

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career

A Freelance Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial
February 6, 2008

SECTION I: INTERVIEW WITH AUTHOR & FREELANCE WRITER MISTI SANDEFUR

Let's get right to it. In this issue, we catch up with author and freelance writer Misti Sandefur. Misti was generous enough to answer the following nine questions in amazing detail.

Your generosity is appreciated Misti.

1. First off, let me say, I admire anyone who can do fiction writing. My brain is just not that expansive.

Your nonfiction work, On the Net Resources for Writers (http://www.mistisandefur.com/on_the_net02_sneak_peak.html), contains, according to your website: ". . . links to publishing companies, other markets for writers, writing contests, book editors, literary agents, sample query letters, book reviewers, research resources, jobs for writers and a whole lot more!"

Seems like a lot of work. What inspired you to tackle a project like this?

Oh yes, it was a lot of work, but I enjoyed it. I have a passion to help others, so when I decided to try something new -- something other than fiction -- I wanted to help other writers in process, and that's how On the Net Resource Guide for Writers was born.

I had planned to keep the book updated annually, however, my workload increased and I was unable. I'm still working on the second edition, but once I finish it, I have no plans to continue. As I said, I wanted to try something new but soon discovered that I enjoyed writing fiction books better than non-fiction books.

With that said, I plan to go ahead and finish the second edition, but if a publisher or anyone were interested, I would sell all rights to the book. This would allow them to keep it updated if they want, and they'll gain all the research information and contacts I have for the book. If they were to offer me a fair price for all of this, I'd gladly sign over the rights.

2. You say on your Life of a Writer blog (<http://mistisandefur.blogspot.com>) that you've been freelancing for 10 years. Tell us about how/why you made that decision.

I believe writing was what God had planned for me, because I first took an interest in it at the age of eight. At that time, I wrote short stories. As I aged, in school we wrote a lot of essays, poetry and stories in English. My teachers always praised my work, encouraged me to continue, and they even gave me a few tips.

The encouragement from my teachers, mother and grandmother was what lead me to believe that was what God wanted me to do with my life. Moreover, because I enjoy helping and inspiring others through words, I decided to make writing my life, but it didn't become my full-time job until 2004.

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

3. What did you do before you became a freelance writer?

As I said before, I started writing when I was 8, and I never stopped. I was always writing something and filing it. Then when I entered the 6th grade, my mom bought me my first typewriter. Every night -- with a copy of Writer's Market in tow -- I would type query letters and browse through Writer's Market for potential markets for the stories I had written.

As I grew up and left home, I worked as a Certified Nurses Assistant for approximately three years. After that, I worked as a Home Health Aide, then as a short-order cook, and finally, I became a WAHM so I could write full-time.

When I held a job outside my home, I would write and submit as much and as often as I could after work.

INTERVIEW CONTINUED BELOW

Want to learn how to make at least $250/day writing simple 500-word articles? Read how here: <http://www.inkwelleditorial.com/e11-excerpt.htm>

4. As you do so many different types of writing, what sector(s) are the most lucrative? Least lucrative?

Since I'm not a well-known author, writing and submitting articles as well as writing blog posts for others seems to be the most lucrative. Although, I hope that changes in the future, because I enjoy writing inspirational fiction novels more.

5. How do you get most of your jobs (referrals, email marketing, offline marketing, etc.)?

Most of my jobs come from e-mail marketing, but a few of my current clients came to me -- I like those best. (winks)

6. As a mom, I know your schedule must get pretty hectic sometimes. Explain a typical day "at the office."

When the kids are with me and not at their dad's house, I write at night, as usual. Moreover, my kids are older now; therefore, all I have to deal with these days are school activities such as

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

Christmas plays, Awards Day and graduations (my daughter graduated from the 8th grade last year).

The thing I've found to be a challenge is when they have something school-related during the day. I work from 9pm until 6am, so I sleep during the day. However, if the kids tell me about their school activities in advance, I do my best to complete the assignments I can ahead of time, so I can retire early.

Nevertheless, this is where the challenge comes into play, as I have trouble getting to sleep at night. I believe it's because my body is use to sleeping of a day, and my mind is more productive at night. (Ideas run through my head if I go to bed early.) With that said, I've attended many school functions on only four hours sleep, but like other writer moms, I manage.

7. In your October 3, 2007 post on your blog, you wrote about your biggest mistake as a freelance writer? Read the post here: <http://mistisandefur.blogspot.com/2007/10/my-biggest-freelancewriting-mistake.html>

Can you explain for readers what it was and what you learned from that?

I landed my first highest paid freelance writing job, and when I did, I stopped searching for more to focus on that one. Ultimately, that was my downfall.

I had the job for about one year until something unexpected happened that caused me to lose it. Since I chose to depend on that job and one other client I had at the time, my income plummeted; I went from earning $800 a month to $100 a month.

Months later, I was finally able to land a few new clients to solve my financial problems, but if I hadn't stopped looking for writing jobs in the first place, I may not have had to suffer the financial heartache.

My advice to other writers is this: You can't always depend on freelance writing jobs to last forever, because some companies, publications or etc. may not make it, some will pay for a while then one day stop paying, or something unexpected may pop up that causes you to lose that writing job.

With that said, you should ALWAYS have a few other clients as well, just in case one doesn't work out. With no other clients under your belt, if something happens that causes you to lose the only big freelance writing job you have, then you lose a big chunk of the income you've been depending on to pay bills, feed your family and etc. Though, I don't suggest that you take on more work than you can handle.

Only take on what you can manage, but make sure that if something happens with your biggest paying client, you'll still be financially stable until you can replace the client you lost with a new one.

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

8. Where do you see yourself in five years as a freelance writer?

My goal is to focus more on writing inspirational fictions books, and if I achieve it within five years, I still plan to continue blogging and writing articles, but I hope to have at least three more inspirational fiction books in the market by then.

9. For new writers, what is the number one piece of advice you would offer them.

Don't give up on your dreams, work toward them. To reach those dreams, all you have to do is write often and study the craft frequently. The more you write and study, the better writer you will become.

Thanks Misti!

It was my pleasure!

MISTI SANDEFUR BIO

Misti writes with the intention -- that through words -- she'll help, inspire and entertain many. As a dedicated writer, she composes articles, SEO content, short stories, e-books, print books and personal essays for regional and national publications, book producers, businesses and fellow writers who have too much on their plates and need assistance.

Furthermore, she's the publisher and editor of the Coffee Break for Writers e-zine (<http://www.coffeeforwriters.com/>), author of two books (published under Misti Jackson), and she blogs regularly for Teevivo and Pure Blogging.

Misti Sandefur and her husband (a veteran of the United States Marine Corps) share their country home with her 20-year-old stepson, 15-year-old daughter, 13-year-old son, 12-year-old son, two ferrets, two Pomeranians and a blue heeler. She also has an 18-year-old stepdaughter who currently lives on a military base with her fellow Navy friends.

You can find out more about Misti on her official website (<http://www.mistisandefur.com>) and on her Life as a Writer blog (<http://mistisandefur.blogspot.com>).

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

SECTION III: FREELANCE WRITING CONTEST & OTHER NEWS

Freelance Writing Contest: Win Money!

Freelance writer Bridget Butler of GreenThumbArticles.com is having a writing contest for the most contributed articles:

She explains: I have started a small niche gardening article directory. For the month of February, I am having a writing contest with the following prizes:

$25 to the person who writes the most articles;

$15 dollars to the second place winner; and

$15 for the person who refers the most authors.

You may check out the site at <http://www.GreenThumbArticles.com>.

DESPERATELY SEEKING Freelance Writing Websites & Blogs That Accept Ads

If you know of a website and/or blog that would be ideal for freelance writers to advertise their product/service, please send me the link so I can check it out.

Send link to at info@InkwellEditorial.com with “Ad Site for Freelance Writers” in the Subject line.

Thank you.

INTERVIEW SUBJECT NEEDED: Moderately Successful Affiliate Marketer

For the March 19th issue, I'd really like to interview someone who earns the bulk of their income from writing, blogging, drawing, etc., but who's had moderate success with affiliate marketing, eg, $750/month or more.

If you are that person or you know of someone, please email me. It's an email interview consisting of 8-10 questions. Contact me at info@InkwellEditorial.com with “Affiliate Marketer Interviewee” in the Subject line.

Thanks in advance.

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwel Editorial

SECTION III: My Freelance Writing Life (aka Yuwanda's Corner)

I realized when I started to put together this issue that this is the 10th release since I started republishing the newsletter again last June (I published one a few years ago). Wow, time has flown!

From writing white papers, to SEO writing to making money blogging to writing for the B2B sector, the variety of freelance professionals who've shared their knowledge in my little newsletter amazes me.

Once again, a sincere thank you to all. I'm truly humbled by the willingness of freelancers to share so freely. FYI, links to all previous issues are listed in SECTION IV below.

Oh my goodness, I have so much to impart, but I'm going to try and keep it brief – and relevant.

One of my freelance writing goals, as listed in the last issue, was to make SEO writing at least 50% of my income this year. Well, for the month of January, I accomplished that with flying colors. SEO writing made up the bulk of my income.

I think this is due to two things: (i) January is a slow month for other sectors; and (ii) I've been concentrating all of my marketing efforts in this niche.

If you freelance, then you probably know that it is a seasonal industry, running like this: From about the third week of January through May is high season. Things slow down in June, July and August. They pick back up in September, and go strong through about the second week of November. Then, they don't pick back up again until the end of January/the beginning of February, thus completing the annual cycle.

SEO writing has not followed this pattern whatsoever. I've been busy since the end of November, when I first started to heavily concentrate on this market. There are days where orders come in so fast that I can't outsource them fast enough – they have to wait until the next day.

I made over $4,000 from one client alone in a 30-day period (read more on how to do this here: <http://www.inkwelleditorial.com/make-money-writing-seo-content.htm>). I have seven that I do work for on a regular basis now, and all I can say is – thank goodness for outsourcing. Otherwise I wouldn't be able to keep up.

While this is a good problem to have (too much business), when you're trying to fit in family time, concentrate on nurturing other income streams and update blogs, produce newsletters, etc., it can be a disaster.

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

For about a week, I literally didn't know my head from my tail. I had to get out of the eye of the storm to create some structure. Now that I have that, things are running a bit smoother around here. Feedback from other SEO writers bear out the fact that this is normal in this sector. Whew!

Regarding freelance writing goals, nobody took me up on my offer in the last newsletter to send in their 2008 freelance writing goals. In every issue, I'm going to leave mine listed. This serves two purposes:

- (i) It keeps me on track: As I wrote in the last issue, the best way to achieve a goal is to tell the world about it. This holds your feet to the fire; and
- (ii) It'll hopefully inspire you to keep working on your goals – and, if you don't have any for this year, to make some and get going on them!

My 2008 Freelance Writing Goals

- 1) Monetize my sites more; (UPDATE: I still have to figure out how to get moving on this other than AdSense. I'd love to do better with affiliate marketing, but I've never had a lot of luck with it. I'll keep thinking on this).
- 2) Make SEO content writing at least 50% of my income; (UPDATE: for the month of January, exceeded this goal; will continue to track every successive month)
- 3) Finish the two ebooks I'm working on; (UPDATE: Am 20% done with one)
- 4) Start two minisites; and
- 5) Get one ebook on Amazon.com.

Site/Blog Growth! I'm so psyched about my website and blog growth. I've had my website since 1999, for better or worse. There was one point where I didn't update it for almost two years, yet it remained live.

I've never really cared about website or blog stats – I still don't really because I make the bulk of my income from actual projects. But, as I have an increasing interest in creating passive income, it's something I'm trying to pay more attention to.

Once I can really afford it, I'd like to hire a professional firm to take over the whole thing – ie, optimize it perfectly, redesign it and add all the relevant bells and whistles. Until I'm completely debt free though (except for my mortgage), I don't want to spend money on this.

So for now, I'm just doing what I can to nurture the slow growth I've got going.

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

How to Track Your Website & Blog Growth

Doing what I can do, I started to really pay attention to my website again in late 2006/early 2007. From some techie stats like Technorati and Alexa, my website and blog are becoming more popular.

I've moved from a website Alexa rank of almost 3,000,000 to just below 900,000 now. And my blog rank is just under 250,000 on Technorati. While these aren't great stats, for just the little amount of promotion I do, it works. Primarily, I do the following on a regular basis.

4 Things You Can Do to Increase Traffic to Your Website/Blog

Social Bookmarking: I use Digg, Propeller and recently StumbleUpon. I also manually add my URL to Google. The link is here: <http://www.google.com/addurl/?continue=/addurl>

Blog Update & Article Marketing: I update my blog on a regular basis and post articles to sites like AssociatedContent. Lately, I haven't been using the free article marketing sites because I simply don't have time to post.

Blog Commenting: I've started to be more social, ie, commenting on other blogs, where appropriate. I should do this much more, but again, I just really don't have much time to devote to website/blog marketing.

On a more personal note, I'm back in training for this year's marathon. I did my first one in 2006, missed last year's due to a combination of a car accident and laziness as far as training. I walked 13 miles a couple of weekends ago (in 30 degree weather no less) and 11 miles this past weekend with my sister.

I was so sore on Sunday that it was a good thing that all I'd planned to do was lie on the couch and watch the Super Bowl. I have until November to get back into shape to run 26.2 miles. Speaking of which, gotta go squeeze in some treadmill time.

Next Issue: Wednesday, February 27th. Be good until then everybody!

Editorially yours,
Yuwanda Black, Publisher
<http://www.InkwellEditorial.com>
<http://www.InkwellEditorial.blogspot.com>
<http://www.SEO-Article-Writer.com>
<http://www.SEO-Articles-for-Sale.com>

P.S.: Want to start making $100-$200/day as a freelance writer in ANY niche -- right away? Log onto <http://www.FreelanceWritingWebsite.com> for details.

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

P.P.S.: Be featured in the newsletter! How? Send an email to info@InkwellEditorial.com with a "Yes, I'd like to be interviewed for the newsletter."

Who do we like to interview? Successful freelancers — eg, writers, graphic designers, illustrators, web designers, copywriters, editors, reviewers, etc.

We look for "success/how I did it stories." The main goal of the newsletter is to give readers first-hand information on how others achieved freelance success. Discovered a new niche? Snagged a big client? Used a marketing technique effectively? Tell us about it.

Your story doesn't have to be unique; it just has to be something you tried that worked. Upon receipt of your email stating your interest in being interviewed, you will be contacted with all the details.

We hope to hear from you soon.

Your Ideas Count! Send in your comments/questions/suggestions, etc. Have a freelancing issue you'd like to see covered? Send an email to info@inkwelleditorial.com. We'll do our best to cover it.

Want to read previous issues? Click on links below.

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

SECTION IV: PREVIOUS ISSUES

Issue 1: June 6, 2007 can be found at <http://www.inkwelleditorial.com/newsletter.pdf>
Topic: How to Make Money with Elance; Featured Freelancer: Michelle Devon

Issue 2: June 20, 2007 can be found at <http://www.inkwelleditorial.com/Newsletter/6-20-07.pdf>
Topic: Get Paid to Write SEO Articles, Web Copy & More; Featured Freelancer: Clark Covington of Internet Research Associates

Issue 3: July 18, 2007 can be found at <http://www.inkwelleditorial.com/Newsletter/7-18-07-freelance-writing-newsletter.pdf>
Topic: How to Make Money Blogging; Featured Freelancer: Paula Mooney

Issue 4: August 15, 2007 can be found at <http://www.inkwelleditorial.com/Newsletter/8-15-07-freelance-writing-newsletter.pdf>
Topic: How to Make Money Writing for the B2B Sector; Featured Freelancer: Meryl Evans

Issue 5: September 12, 2007 can be found at <http://www.inkwelleditorial.com/Newsletter/9-12-07-freelance-writing-newsletter.pdf>
Topic: How to Make Money Writing White Papers; Featured Freelancer: Gordon Graham

Issue 6: September 26, 2007 can be found at <http://www.inkwelleditorial.com/Newsletter/9-26-07-freelance-writing-newsletter.pdf>
Topic: How to Make Money as a Freelance Cartoonist; Featured Freelancer: Dan Rosandich

Issue 7: October 17, 2007 can be found at <http://www.inkwelleditorial.com/Newsletter/10-17-07-freelance-writing-newsletter.pdf>
Topic: How to Make Money Freelancing for Newspaper; Featured Freelancer: Sue Lick, Author of Freelancing for Newspapers

Issue 8: November 7, 2007 can be found at <http://www.inkwelleditorial.com/Newsletter/11-7-07-freelance-writing-newsletter.pdf>
Topic: How to Make Money as a Freelance Ghostwriter; Featured Freelancer: Amanda Evans

Issue 9: December 5, 2007 can be found at <http://www.inkwelleditorial.com/Newsletter/12-5-07-freelance-writing-newsletter.pdf>
Topic: A Roundup of Freelance Writing Salaries from around the Web

Issue 10: January 16, 2008 can be found at <http://www.inkwelleditorial.com/Newsletter/1-16-08-freelance-writing-newsletter.pdf>
Topic: Spotlight on SEO Content Writing; Featured Freelancer: Sharon Hurley Hall

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

QUIT YOUR JOB AND WRITE SEO CONTENT FOR A LIVING?

Yes, it can be done, and I'll prove it to you by showing you exactly how to land projects.

“If you're making between $30,000-$60,000/year, you can pretty easily replace your income as an SEO content provider.”

Ever run across those ads on job boards that read something like the following:

Article Writer Wanted: Urgent! I need some articles on my site targeting students.

OR

Seeking writer to write several "how to" articles for my web site. Approximately 400 to 1000 words each.

OR

I need 100 unique articles. Each article will be 400 - 500 words in length. I need the articles completing in 10 days. The topic for the articles is weddings.

OR

I require services of an article writer for my blog. All work must be original and search friendly according to our specs.

OR

I need an article writer to provide 20 articles per week on various topics. I will pay weekly Requirements: 400-500 words per article. And the list goes on and on.

SEO writing is plentiful. And, as it's a relatively new form of writing, quality providers (writers) are hard to find. SEO companies, web design companies and internet marketing firms, in particular, are all scrambling for this type of content.

In my SEO ebook, I tell you EXACTLY how to go about getting it. You won't be left in the dark about anything. I outline EXACTLY what I did to start making between $100-$400/day – relatively easily (the hard part is keeping up with all the work).

If you're looking for a sure-fire way to make money working from home as a freelance writer, this ebook is for you!

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

Marketing for SEO Article Writing Work

Within a few minutes (literally!) of sending out my first batch of emails to potential clients, I was contacted by a Search Engine Optimization (SEO) company.

It was the owner and he wanted to know my per-article rate and my blogging rates. At the time, I didn't even offer blog writing. This company had hundreds of clients and was in dire need of writers, bloggers and forum posters.

I never wound up doing any work for them – at least not yet anyway! Note: Many times, potential clients keep your info on file for later use.

$4,000 in 30 Days from One Client!

But, over the next week, I was contacted by four companies. I picked up two clients during my first week of advertising. From Thanksgiving to Christmas, one of these clients gave me close to $4,000 in work and consistently sends me $250-$750 worth of work per week. Remember, this is just one client!

$750 for two day's work!

Another client I picked up was a real estate client. He was developing an endless supply of websites around a particular domain name he registered. This project could literally go on for years. To date, I've completed copy for 15 sites for him. Two pages of copy per site at $25/per page = $750. And, his copy was only 200-400 words, not the standard 500 words.

Now, I have seven SEO companies that I get work from on a pretty regular basis. And, they keep me pretty busy – to the point where I outsource work to three freelancers on a regular basis.

As I market more, I'm getting away from doing the actual work myself to outsourcing it and overseeing the work of freelancers.

A Typical $250 Day

I routinely bill $100-$400/day. A slow day is $100. And that's usually because I've put off doing some actual writing to do some marketing or take a break, which means doubling up the next day. Usually, clients will email me projects, saying something like the following, eg:

Can I have 500 words on the following 5 keyword phrases please.

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

Due date: 2/15. (keyword phrases would be listed)

Some clients give 2-3 days; others give a week to ten days. I'll send a short email back saying something to the effect of:

“Article ordered received and due date noted. Your business is appreciated.”

Nicheing It to Success

If you have a niche – especially if it's a highly lucrative one like finance, real estate, insurance, etc., pitch yourself that way. In SEO writing, webmasters make a mint with these types of articles because they are high-paying niches.

And if you don't have a niche? Develop one. It's relatively easy to do. The ebook discusses exactly how to go about it.

A note about SEO companies: Many SEO companies are small organizations, but they work on hundreds of sites. And, once they have a client, the client usually stays with them for months or years. This means a continuous need for fresh copy.

So, getting in good with a few SEO companies will produce more work than you could possibly handle alone, as evidenced by the stories above.

This ebook will tell you exactly how to contact SEO companies, what to say (I'll reveal to you the exact email I send to potential clients), what questions to expect from them, how to set rates to seamlessly bring in clients – and more!

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

WHAT YOU GET WITH YOUR PURCHASE

A Preview: Following is the Table of Contents, so you'll see exactly what's covered. It's a "no-fluff, get-right-to-the-point, exactly-the-information-you-need-to-get-started-right-away" kind of ebook.

FREE Marketing Ebook: Because marketing is critical to the success of every venture, the marketing ebook, The Small Biz Owner's Complete Marketing Kit!, is included as a FREE add on. The marketing techniques discussed are free and low-cost and can be applied to any for-profit venture. This ebook is sold separately on InkwellEditorial.com for $24.95.

I truly want you to succeed as a freelancer, without struggling as so many do. There's no need for this, especially in the SEO sector. So apply the knowledge within and clients will come that much easier.

Freelance Success Story: One freelancer emailed me in a panic. After she bought the ebook and followed it exactly, she started getting queries – before she was ready to take on work (she worked full-time). Her story is detailed below.

This ebook contains everything you need to start a successful freelance writing career in the SEO sector. All you'll have to worry about is how you're going to get all the work done that's going to come your way – and this is no exaggeration!

Here's to your success!

Sincerely,
Yuwanda Black, Publisher
InkwellEditorial.com
InkwellEditorial.blogspot.com
SEO-Article-Writer.com
SEO-Articles-for-Sale.com

P.S.: Click the following link to order and start your SEO writing career right away!

<http://www.InkwellEditorial.com/bizguides.htm>

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

How to Make $250+/Day Writing Simple 500-Word Articles aka How to Start Making Money as an SEO Content Writer.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

PREFACE . . . Page 5

The Beginning: Why I Chose to Be an SEO Content Writer ... Page 6

The Quest for Passive Online Income ... Page 7

DEFINING A NICHE . . . Page 11

Why It's Important to Pitch Yourself as a Niche Writer First... Page 11

My Niche Marketing Results... Page 12

How to Develop a Highly Profitable SEO Writing Niche ... Page 13

What SEO Companies Want to Know About Freelance Writers ... Page 13

WHAT EXACTLY IS SEO WRITING? ... Page 15

Keyword Research Tools Explained ... Page 15

MARKETING FOR SEO WORK ... Page 17

How to Put Together an SEO Marketing Campaign ... Page 17

The One-Week Marketing Plan: The Plan that Brought in 14 Projects in a Little Over a Week ... Page 17

Query Email I Send to SEO Companies ... Page 20

DEALING WITH CLIENTS ... Page 22

What to Expect When Clients Contact You ... Page 22

Page - 15 -

©Inkwell Editorial: 2008. All material in this newsletter is copyrighted. It may not be reproduced, reprinted or republished in any manner without the express, written consent of the publisher. Violators will be prosecuted.

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

Questions Frequently Asked by Clients ... Page 22

HOW TO HANDLE JOB ORDERS ... Page 24

You've Got Work: Now What? ... Page 24

ALL ABOUT WRITING SEO ARTICLES ... Page 27

Sample SEO Article... Page 28

How to Check the Keyword Density of Your SEO Articles ... 29

Keyword Article Optimizing Tips You Should Know ... Page 30

The Hardest Part of Writing SEO Articles ... Page 30

How to Write 500-Word SEO Articles in 45 Minutes or Less ... Page 31

Delivering Content to Clients ... Page 32

RATES & BILLING ... Page 33

Should You Get a Percentage of Payment Up Front? ... Page 33

Getting Paid: PayPal ... Page 34

Accepting Payments by Check ... Page 35

SUMMARY ... Page 36

$2,500/Week Writing SEO Articles ... Page 36

A FREELANCE SEO WRITING SUCCESS STORY ... Page 38

A FREELANCE SUCCESS STORY: SEO WRITING COMES TO YOU!

A Freelance Writer's Success Story: How She Started to Get Queries from Clients before Starting to Market

A panicked freelancer recently contacted me with a problem most would love to have – before she even started advertising, work was coming her way. “Huh, how did that happen?” you might be wondering.

Let me explain.

Getting Clients w/ No Marketing – It Happens!

“Mary” is a long-time reader of my blog and recently purchased my ebook on SEO writing. She said she did everything I said and before she could even start to market for work, a query from an SEO company had come her way. She wrote:

“Dear Yuwanda:

First of all, please forgive my asking you this. But I have a wonderful "problem" that has occurred suddenly. . . Let me explain. I've been a long-time reader of your blog. I've been trying to start a free-lance biz and have faltered. I saw your blog postings about how you got SEO writing gigs almost lickety split, so I purchased your e-book and did everything you said.

Here's my website: (she listed her website address). The site's been up for a few weeks. But I have done nothing. (I work full-time and wanted to finish up a small free-lance newsletter gig I have via my copywriting site before I started marketing SEO writing. I never sent out ANY queries. No marketing. Zilch. Zero. Nada. Goose egg. However....today, I receive a query from an SEO firm.”

So, why was she in a panic?

Handling Clients When You're Not Ready for the Work

The client contacted Mary via email, asking questions she had no idea how to answer, so she emailed me. I called her to give her some advice, to help walk her through what to say. Following are a few tips on how to handle client queries when you're not ready for the work, for whatever reason.

1. Wait: As in, don't be in a hurry to get back to the client. As freelancers, we're trained to get back to the client as soon as possible. And, ordinarily, this is a good idea. But, if you're unsure about something, don't rush to get back to the client.

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

In this case, the client had asked Mary some questions she didn't know how to answer because SEO writing was a new niche for her. Obviously smart and capable, with just a few minutes of web research, she could have found the answers she needed. Or, barring that

2. Ask an “Expert”: Mary contacted me, which is exactly what I would've done in her shoes. If you can't find what you need on the web, or time really is indeed pressing, then ask someone.

Most freelance writers are very generous with their knowledge.

In fact, for one part of Mary's query, she needed someone who had done this type of work before to know how to respond the client. He'd emailed her asking some easy questions, eg, “How much do you charge per article,” and some industry specific questions, ie, “Also will you include imbedded links in your sig that we supply?”

For this last question, she was in the dark as to what he was asking. She wrote me saying, rather hilariously, “I tell him I can certainly imbed links (but between you and me, I don't even know what that is!!!) and, trying to fudge a bit and gather my wits, ask him how many sites he has in mind for submitting to. . . Now I'm completely at a loss.”

I explained to her what he was referring to so that she could compose an appropriate response.

3: Stay Plugged into a “Relevant” Writing Community: This will do two things: (i) give you an immediate place to turn to get answers to your questions; and (ii) keep you up to date on what's happening in your niche.

Staying plugged in can be as simple as reading industry blogs. You don't have to go off and sign up for, or join, anything.

For example, since I started SEO writing, I subscribe to and read Web Pro News on a regular basis. This online news digest is great for keeping abreast of what's going on in and around the web.

From social bookmarking to blogging to the latest on Yahoo! and Google, if it's pertinent to the web, you'll find it here.

Sometimes, I don't understand some of the technology or terminology mentioned, which clues me in that I have some more reading to do. I remember when I first read about (LSI) Latent Semantic Indexing (a big Scooby Doo “Huh” moment for me), I was like, “What the heck is that?” I looked it up, did some further reading and gained an understanding.

Knowing your industry helps to convince clients that you know what you're doing. Strangely enough, LSI came up in a conversation with a potential client. I felt as if he was throwing it out there to kind of test my knowledge.

How to Start a Successful Freelance Career: A Newsletter by Inkwell Editorial

So, this is a really important tip, especially for SEO writing, because it is a niche that changes constantly and rapidly.

So, what happened with Mary?

How to Create a Work/Life Balance from the Beginning

As I wrote in the ebook, when you market for SEO writing work, be prepared for it to come fast. You can get busy relatively easily.

Mary works fulltime and this incident kind of clued her into what to expect once she started to market. So, she's decided to clear a few things off her plate and market slowly for clients, which I think is extremely smart on her part.

Many of us freelancers get so excited about the possibility of work that we jump into it without erecting work/life balance boundaries. I'd told Mary to be prepared to work 2-4 hours in the evenings once she starts to market. To that she responded:

“Working 2-4 hours a night with my workload will not be easy. I'll have to figure out some way to do it though. . . . So I'm REALLY looking forward to your post on how to hire and work with subcontractors. ;-)”

###

NOTE: There will be a further update to “Mary’s story” on InkwellEditorial.blogspot.com the week of 2/11, ie, what’s happened with the 3 companies who’ve contacted her within her first week of sending out marketing queries. Yes, 3 companies have made direct contact. Stay tuned for details!

The moral of this story: SEO writing is the hottest niche in freelance writing now. And, good, competent SEO writers who understand the industry are in short supply. It’s an easy field to enter, requiring only good writing ability.

Age is not a barrier, education (or lack thereof) is not a barrier, nor is experience. All you need is the ability to write and good research skills – and you’re on your way to earning $200-$400/day. In my first month, I made close to $2,000 – from one client alone.

Within 2 months, I was so busy that I started to outsource work to other freelancers – which I continue to do. If you’ve ever wanted a job where you could work from home, and earn a better-than-decent living, SEO writing is for you.

This ebook provides everything you need to get started – today if you want!
Order now at <http://www.InkwellEditorial.com/bizguides.htm>.

Page - 19 -

©Inkwell Editorial: 2008. All material in this newsletter is copyrighted. It may not be reproduced, reprinted or republished in any manner without the express, written consent of the publisher. Violators will be prosecuted.